covenant

“These covenants are made to make the world a better place. You are blessed to be a blessing to others. A blessing to your family, to your friends, and to strangers.” – Pastor Paul Dean

The covenants we talked about in worship today have something in common: they’re all intended to make the world a better place. You are blessed to be a blessing to others. The covenant that we call the Ten Commandments is largely focused on treating ourselves and others better. It’s like God says: Do your best, and the world will be a better place.

This doesn’t mean that we need to do better, or do more, in order for God to love us better or more. That’s already free. It’s already done. The covenants God invites us into look more like a partnership, working with God to create new life around us as we share what we have and who we are with others.

What does that look like? This is a chance for you to brainstorm. How can you, specifically, be a blessing to others in authentic ways? There is space below for you to reflect and write in the best answers for you and your situation.

How can you show up for your family in ways that bring life and spread love?

How can you show up in your school / work / daily routine in ways that bring life and spread love? Is there anyone who needs to be seen or heard? Is anyone hungry, for food or compassion or hope? Are there needs around you that you are particularly equipped to fill? Is it okay to step outside your comfort zone to be a blessing to others?

How can you show up in your community / church / world in ways that bring life and spread love? Are there injustices that need to be fixed? As you go through your day, look around and ask yourself who is not present. Do some people feel excluded from the spaces you’re in? Why? How can you help identify and remove barriers that separate us? Who around you is hungry or cold? Who has no home, or no voice? What have you been given (resources, time, talent, insight, proximity, creativity, connections, experience) that you can use in this covenant that’s making the world a better place?

How will you speak Covenant into the world around you?
